

Veterans Aid Scam

Unscrupulous insurance agents are holding presentations at senior centers and residential care facilities in an effort to persuade ineligible seniors to apply for the Veterans Aid and Attendance Program, a benefit only available to low-income disabled veterans and their surviving spouses.

The agents offer to help vets qualify for the program and complete the necessary paperwork in exchange for a fee. The scammers will offer to move seniors' assets by converting trusts or purchasing annuities in order to qualify the seniors as low income.

The insurance agents profit from processing fees or hefty commissions on the sales of annuities, but the veterans get nothing in return – and may be saddled with annuities that cannot be canceled. In some cases, veterans may have to repay the government for benefits they were not entitled to receive.
